

EXCLUSIVE VEHICLE TIPS FOR

OPERATION FLAMING DART

F4 Phantom

Phantom is fast and maneuverable, but these same attributes that enable you to avoid enemy MiG fighters in the air can make it difficult to line up your targets on the ground. There are three enemy bases clustered together on the east side of the mainland.

If you come in low and fast, you'll have a difficult time firing your missiles and at least one napalm bomb before zooming by your target. Try climbing high and then taking a vertical dive to the N.V.A. base or airfield. You'll see your targets all the way down, and the angle of attack will make it almost impossible for enemy fighters to take you down. Oh, one more thing—don't forget to pull up.

Sheridan

After softening up the N.V.A. airfields and bases with your F4 Phantoms and Corsairs, your ground assaults will be easier from inside a Sheridan. You can airlift the tank to the mainland, or wait until you capture the base at D, 5, at which time the Sheridan will spawn. Although this tank is not heavily armored, it has outstanding firepower. You control the main gun and machine gun from the driver position, so you can quickly move back and forth from vehicle targets to enemy infantry.

* When playing as the N.V.A. in single player, no T54 spawns here.

ZSU-57

With Phantoms and Corsairs flying non-stop missions in Operation Flaming Dart, the ZSU-57 is the N.V.A.'s most important land-based vehicle. However, this mobile anti-aircraft gun lacks a machine gunner, so you are extremely vulnerable to rocket launchers, grenade attacks, and any helicopters or jets that zero in on your location. The trick is to keep moving and use buildings or trees to partially shield the ZSU-57 from enemy eyes. Park your vehicle on an upward slope to gain valuable elevation for your guns.
